Mock Admission Committee

(learn how your application packets are reviewed by U.S. universities)

The Mock Admission Committee encourages students to explore a variety of factors that are weighed by an admissions committee at a U.S. university when making decisions to admit, wait-list or deny a student admission to a particular college or university. During the mock admissions simulation students review the basics of the college-admission process in a group-oriented, hands-on activity.

Participants will be divided into small groups and will play the role of admissions officers. Each group will be given a set of "students" and will decide which students will be admitted to "their" university.
