

Meera Venkatachalam

BA., MA., PhD (SOAS, University of London)

Meera Venkatachalam is an anthropologist and historian. Her doctoral research focussed on West Africa, and was situated at the intersection of slavery, religion and religious change. She has worked in academic departments in the UK, West Africa and India.

Her current research is focussed on migration, religious movements and religious extremism in the Global South. She has also written extensively about India-Africa relations, in the context of diplomacy and development cooperation.

Main publications include:

King, Kenneth & Meera Venkatachalam (eds). (Forthcoming, 2021). India's Development Diplomacy and Soft Power in Africa. London: James Currey

Modi, Renu & Meera Venkatachalam (eds). (Forthcoming, 2021). India-Africa Partnerships for Food Security and Capacity Building: South-South Cooperation. London: Palgrave MacMillan, International Political Economy Series

Venkatachalam, Meera; Renu Modi & Johann Salazar. 2020. Common Threads: Fabrics Made-in-India for Africa. Leiden: African Studies Centre Leiden

Venkatachalam, Meera. 2015. Slavery, Memory and Religion in Southeastern Ghana, c. 1850-present. London & NY: Cambridge University Press & International African Institute.